

How Does the Smoke-Free Law Affect Churches, Chapels and Other Places of Worship?

From 1 July 2007 almost all enclosed public places and workplaces are required by law to be smoke-free. This includes churches, chapels and other places of worship.

What does the smoke-free legislation require?

- That people do not smoke inside the church, chapel etc.
- That no-smoking signs are prominently displayed at entrances that are normally used by worshippers and visitors.

Does the law require that the no-smoking signs are fixed to entrance doors or the fabric of the church etc?

No. The law only requires that signs are displayed at entrances. Ways in which a no-smoking sign could be displayed include the following:

- On a notice board inside a porch.
- On a fold out notice board that is placed at the entrance door, when the church etc. is open.
- On a board that can be hung from a door latch or handle, when the church etc. is open.

What sort of sign is required?

The law requires that the sign is of at least A5 size, displays the international no-smoking symbol and has written on it:

No smoking. It is against the law to smoke in these premises

Can churches still light candles and burn incense?

Yes they can. The law only applies to tobacco and other substances that people smoke.

Does the smoke-free law apply to gatherings or prayer group meetings held in someone's home?

No the law does not apply.

Where can churches etc. get advice?

Contact your local Environmental Health Department to speak to an officer or to arrange an advisory visit:
